Rails vs. Sinatra

- ☞ Rails gives you patterns and practices.
- ☞ Rails is a set of good working assumptions.
- ☞ Sinatra gives your code an interface to the web server and the web.
- ☞ Sinatra doesn't really make a lot of assumptions; it just offers features at reasonable places, in case you want them.

Before we demo, what have I already done?

1. Installed Ruby

☞ On the Mac I favor

☞ Homebrew (mxcl.github.com/homebrew) and

☞ rbenv (github.com/sstephenson/rbenv).

☞ On Windows I'd start with

☞ RubyInstaller (rubyinstaller.org) and

☞ Pik (github.com/vertiginous/pik).

2. Installed Sinatra

☞ `gem install Sinatra`

Anything else?

☞ Git

☞ I use Git to manage my code; it'll come up in the demo:

☞ With Homebrew on a Mac just `brew install git`

☞ Otherwise download from git-scm.com

☞ Gems

☞ I'll be using the builder and heroku gems shortly as well:

☞ `gem install bundler heroku`

A Brief Tour of Sinatra

Deployment Options

☞ Phusion Passenger: www.modrails.com

☞ Adds elegant Ruby support to Apache and Nginx servers.

☞ JRuby: jruby.org

☞ Java Virtual Machine implementation of Ruby. You'll also want github.com/jruby/jruby-rack or something from recipes.sinatrarb.com/p/deployment/jruby

☞ Heroku: www.heroku.com

☞ Cloud hosting for Ruby, Python, Node.js, Clojure, Java, and Scala.

Now let's build an app.
